JOHN RANDOLPH OF ROANOKE. - From the Danville Times.]--Mr. Randolph frequently employed Ministers of the Gospel to preach to his negroes, and sometimes, when the sermon was over, he would make remarks himself.

He once invited the Rev. Mr. Clopton to pray for him. Mr. Clopton began, but was soon arrested in his petition. "Stop, sir," said he, "if that is the way you are going to to the suffering. If taken reguarly and persispray, you must go into the garden or garret."

On another occasion, he said, "Stop sir, if

For the following contribution, bearing upon the same subject, we are indebted to the Rev. E. W. Roach, of Charlotte county. Va., who received his information from the Rev. A. W. Clopton. From the high standing of the wit-

Mr Randolph, from the dignity of the Rev. A. W. Clopton's character, became peculiarly attached to him. He frequently invited him to his house to preach to his negroes; and on these occasions, he would have thin collected from his different plantations, to the number of several hundred, to hear him.

"On one occasion, after Mr. Clopton had closed his discourse, Mr. R. undertook to deliv-

"He dwelt on the gratitude that was due to God for his kindness, and illustrated by his own kindness to his servants. He spoke of the ingratitude shown to the Creator, and illustrated by their ingratitude to him. "My ancestors," said he, have raised all of you save one, whom I bought from a hard master for sympathy's sake. I have cherished and nour-ished you like children; I have fed you and clothed you better than my neighbors have fed and clothed their servants. I have allowed you more privileges than others have been allowed. Consequently, any good heart would have

"But, oh! the ingratitude of the depraved heart. After all my superior kindness, when I was, in my feeble health, sent a minister to Russia, you all thought I would not live to return, and you and the overseers (damn you-God forgive me) wasted and stole all you could and came well-nigh ruining me. But come back, and I will forgive; come back to God, and He will forgive. My negroes, hear what the elergyman says. He stopped, and said, "Don't think I mean any disrespect by calling you negroes, for I must inform you that negro is only a Spanish word for black.

How New Jersey Got out of the U. S. The origin of the allusion to New Jersey as a foreign country is said to be as follows: After the downfall of the first Napoleon, his brother Joseph, who had been King of Spain, and his nephew, Prince Murat, son of the King of Italy, sought refuge in this country and brought much wealth with them. Joseph Bonaparte wished desire to become a citizen, as he hoped to return to Europe. To enable him a loss elien to hold real estate required a special act of the Legislature. He tried to get one passed for and built magnificent dwellings and fitted them up in the most costly manner. Rare paintings, statuary, &c., were profuse, and selected with care, and the grounds laid out with exquisite taste. Jos. Bonaparte's residence was, perhaps, the finest in America. Thousands of people visited it from all parts of the country, and were treated courteously. He was The Philadelphians, finding that he had apparently no end of money and that he used it to benefit business generally, regretted, when it was too late, that they had refused to let him locate among themselves; and, to keep up their mortification, would always taunt Jerseymen with having a king-with importing the King of Spain to rule over them; they were called Spaniards and foreigners on this account. But these taunts harmed no one, as the Jerseymen lost nothing by their alluring him to settle among them, and the term "foreigner," jokingly applied to Jerseymen, has come down to us long after its origin has been forgotten, except by a few men of the past generation. Many years ago-during the reign of Louis Phillippe, we believe-both Bonaparte and Murat found they could safely return to Fur me, so they sold out and returned .- Newark Courier.

TREED BY BEARS. -- The Detroit Free Press gives the following account of how the hunter became the hunted: A man named Chas. Tyrell was hunting on the St. Clair river when two bears appeared. Somewhat excited he leveled his rifle and fired, and the next moment both bears were coming down upon him at full speed. The hunter saw that they meant business, each uttering fierce growls, and he dropped his gun, caught hold of the limb of a small oak tree, and swung his legs up just in time to save his boots. As he expected, one of them was not long in attempting to secure a close acquaintance. The animal got up about seven feet, and them the limbs refused to let him by. He pawed, bit and growled at a great rate, and, in making a big effort to push away the limbs, fell to the ground .-Tyrell commenced shouting which excited the bears, and one of them was quickly up to the limbs again, when the hunter struck a match and dropped it down on bruin's head, frightening him so that he went down the tree at a lively rate. The hunter had about a dozen matches with him, and every time the bears started to climb he would light one and let it started to climb he would light one and let it I. C. O'NEAL, fall, the trick never failing to stop their ascent. After a time both seemed to go away, and the hunter carefully commenced to descend. He was just about to touch the ground when both the bears came charging at him out of the was just about to touch the ground when both the bears came charging at him out of the darkness, and he had to go up again, one of his boots being raked by claws before he was above the limbs. The animals made no further efforts to climb the tree, but "tore around" for a full hour at its base. Tyrell dared not descend for fear that they had laid a snare for him, and passed the entire night astride of a limb. In the morning he found the bear he
